

Wildlife Tourism and the Gulf Coast Economy

Economic Study by Datu | July 2013

Wildlife tourism is a vital component of Louisiana's economy

Millions of tourists come to Louisiana every year to experience the natural wonders of our state. The tourism industry – which includes hotels, restaurants, retail and tour guides catering to these tourists – provides more than 82,000 jobs in Louisiana and wildlife tourism generates nearly $2 billion in spending every year.

Tourism depends on a healthy environment

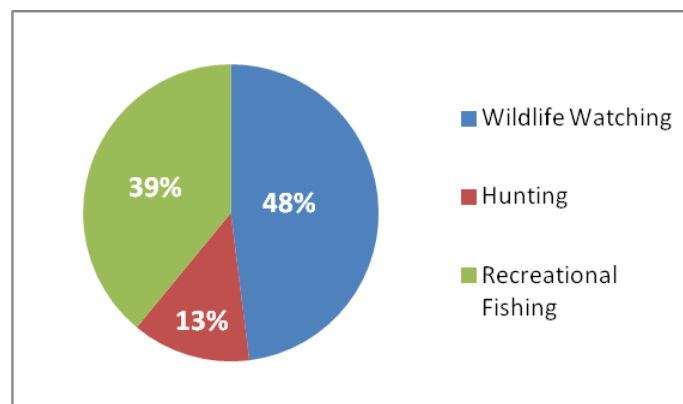

Wildlife tourism relies on the natural beauty of Louisiana, which in turn relies on thriving ecosystems. Repairing the damage to these ecosystems caused by the 2010 Deepwater Horizon oil spill and the channelization of the Mississippi River is critical to maintaining and growing this critical sector of Louisiana's economy.

Wildlife tourism matters to Louisiana

- Louisiana's 10 coastal parishes host nearly 4,400 wildlife tourism-related businesses.
- State and local governments generate over $200 million in tax revenue from tourism, a sum that could pay salaries of more than 5,000 police officers.
- Over 2 million wildlife tourists visit Louisiana every year.

Restoring Our Environment Restores Our Economy

The RESTORE Act dedicates fines paid by parties responsible for the oil spill to restoration in Louisiana and the other Gulf states. This is an unprecedented opportunity to bolster our state's natural resources and the industries that depend on them.
