Wildlife Tourism and the Gulf Coast Economy

Based on a recent Economic Study by Datu Research | 2013

Wildlife tourism is a vital component of the Louisiana economy
Millions of tourists come to Louisiana every year to experience the natural wonders of our state. The tourism industry in general—which includes hotels, restaurants, retail and tour guides—provides more than 82,000 jobs in Louisiana. Wildlife tourism (focused on wildlife watching, hunting and fishing) generates nearly $2 billion in spending every year.

Wildlife Tourism Expenditures ($billions), by Sector

- Wildlife Watching: $.5 B
- Hunting: $.6 B
- Recreational Fishing: $.8 B

Tourism depends on a healthy environment
Wildlife tourism relies on the natural beauty of Louisiana, which in turn relies on thriving ecosystems. Repairing the damage to these ecosystems caused by the 2010 Deepwater Horizon oil spill and the channelization of the Mississippi River is critical to maintaining and growing this critical sector of the Louisiana economy.

Wildlife tourism matters to Louisiana

- The state's 10 coastal parishes host nearly 4,400 wildlife tourism-related businesses.
- Louisiana state and local governments generate over $200 million in tax revenue from wildlife tourism, a sum that could pay salaries of more than 5,000 police officers.
- Over 2 million wildlife tourists visit Louisiana every year.

Restoring Our Environment Restores Our Economy
The RESTORE Act dedicates fines paid by parties responsible for the oil spill to restoration in Louisiana and the other Gulf states. This is an unprecedented opportunity to bolster our state's natural resources and the industries that depend on them.
