

Wildlife Tourism and the Gulf Coast Economy

Economic Study by Datu | July 2013

Wildlife tourism is a vital component of Texas' economy

Millions of tourists come to Texas every year to experience the natural wonders of our state. The tourism industry – which includes hotels, restaurants, retail and tour guides catering to these tourists – provides more than 72,000 jobs in Texas and wildlife tourism generates over $5 billion in spending every year.

Tourism depends on a healthy environment

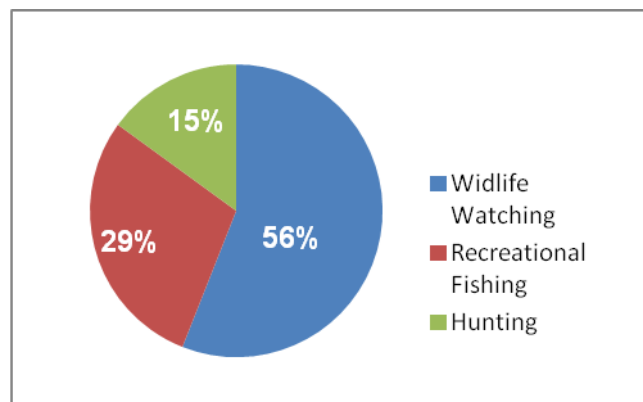

Wildlife tourism relies on the natural beauty of Texas' coast, which in turn relies on thriving ecosystems. Repairing the damage to these ecosystems caused by the 2010 Deepwater Horizon oil spill and the channelization of the Mississippi River is critical to maintaining and growing this critical sector of Texas' economy.

Wildlife tourism matters to Texas

- Texas' 14 coastal counties host nearly 3,800 wildlife tourism-related businesses.
- State and local governments generate nearly $800 million in tax revenue from tourism, a sum that could buy more than 7,600 school buses.
- Over 7.7 million wildlife tourists visit Texas every year.

Restoring Our Environment Restores Our Economy

The RESTORE Act dedicates fines paid by parties responsible for the oil spill to restoration in Texas and the other Gulf states. This is an unprecedented opportunity to bolster our state's natural resources and the industries that depend on them.
